WHEELING, DECEMBER 19, 1893.

The President's Plea for Monarchy. The features of most importance in the President's message on the Hawaiian question are, first, that he based his nction on Mr. Blount's report; and, second, that he did instruct Minister Willis to restore the ex-queen. The importance of these facts is great.

Mr. Blount's report is discredited by every voice that has been heard on the subject outside of the monarchial ring of opium speculators and lottery sharks. It is known as positively as anything can be known that Mr. Blount sought his information in the main from persons known to be favorable to the monarchy, and that so far as he had testimony from the other side he took good care not to include it in the report he made to the President, whose personal commissioner he was. Mr. Blount had gone to Hawaii to make out a case for Mr. Cleveland and the monarchy. He did what he could on that line, and the result of Mr. Blount's arduous labors in this behalf is in turn taken up by the President to make out his defense before the American people. The message, then, in so far as it rests on the Blount report for its statements of facts, is as strong as that report, and no stronger. The second feature of great importance in the message shows that the country was not mistaken, as some supporters of the administration insisted, when it drew from Secretary Gresham's letter to the President the inference that Minister Willis had been instructed to undertake the restoration of Liliouakalani. There was no misapprebension on this point, for the fact is now flatly stated in the message. The President had ordered the very thing which was so offensive to the great body of his countrymen, so repugnant to the American idea, and so strongly resented that his apologists and defenders declared that he would never go that length, but would content himself with opposing to the end the project of an-The scheme of restoration was defeated by the firm attitude of the provisional government strengthenened by the very natural refusal of the ex-queen to accept the kind offices of the United States government unless it would guarantee to hold her on the toy throne after it had put her there. By the President's own admission the country owes nothing to him for the failure to carry out his absurd and disgraceful res-

SECRETARY GRESHAM'S hatred of one Benjamin Harrison runs all through the Hawaiian message. Gresham canngt forgive Harrison for having been President of the United States.

Work For the Needy.

Pittsburgh and Cleveland are paying a dollar a day on public work started to relieve the urgent need of the unemployed. More accurately, Pittsburgh is paying ten cents an hour. The idea is that the available money shall be made to employ as many men for as long a time as possible at a rate thought to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Work of this character done at this time is out of the line of ordinary publie work. The workmen are selected, not for their efficiency but with a view to their necessities, the most needy being given the preference over the most efficient.

families as can be reached, and the scheme should look as far ahead through the long winter as it is possible to look

The sum of $7,500 proposed to be used in this emergency relief work can be used up very quickly at the ordinary rate of wages. After that what?

When things at home were getting pretty warm for the administration Secretary Gresham sent word to Minister Willis that "the brevity of your dis-patches is embarrassing." If that had been the only embarrassment at that time the whole cabinet, from the President down, would have been enough relieved to dance a jig.

A Street Across the Peninsula.

Among the public works that could be undertaken with substantial results would be a short-cut road over the peninsula, beginning at a point near the Terminal bridge on the west side of the hill and coming out at a point near the Fulton bridge. The saving would be about a quarter of a mile over a hill.

The project has been before the board of county commissioners, but as the work would be within the city limits the commissioners could do nothing with it. The owners of the land would be glad to have the street cut through.

THE President hammers Ex-Minister Stevens for taking the same view of Hawaiian annexation as Secretary Marcy, a Democrat who has never been thought the intellectual inferior of President Cleveland, took nearly forty years ago. The reasons for annexation have increased in number and force since Mr. Marcy's day.

COL, DAN JOHNSON DEAD,

The Brave Veteran Passes Away in His Fifty-seventh Year-His Brilliant War Record and as a Leader of the Democratic Party-Sketch of this Career.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligences PARKERSBURG, W. VA., Dec. 18 .- Col. D. D. Johnson died this afternoon at his home, at Long Reach, West Virginia. The funeral will occur Wednes day afternoon. In the hours when the people west of the Alleghenies needed the services and counsel of all their sons, David D. Johnson was not absent or deficient. He was born in Virginia April 28, 1836, and resided at Long Reach, Tyler coun-ty. He grew up to manhood on his father's farm, laboring nine months each year and enjoying the benefits of a private school at home during winter months. At the age of twenty-one he entered Marietta College, Ohio, where he spent two years, and in June, 1860, graduated from Columbian College (now University), Washington, D. C. From the galleries of Congress he

From the galleries of Congress he listened to the exciting debates of the hour, which presaged the coming storm; attended as spectators the great union convention at Baltimore, in May, 1860, and, returning to the labors of the farm, determined to resist all attempts to dissolve the nation. He took an ac tive part in the canvass that preceded the election of members of the Virginia convention in February, 1861, opposing secession in all its forms; was a month of the mass convecation at Wheeling in May, and also of the delegated convention of June 11, 1861, and did his part tion of what is now West Virginia what we want where we want with the want was a want where we want where we want was a warm which we want with the want was a want which we want which we want where we want which we want where we want was a want which we want which we want was a want which we want was a want which we want was a want which we want which we want was a want was a want which we want was a w secession in all its forms; was a member tion of June 11, 1861, and did his part in preventing what is now West Virginia from being annexed to the southern confederacy. In August, 1862, he entered the Union army as major of the Fourteenth West Virginia Infantry, and was promoted July 29, 1863, to be colonel thereof. He was in many hard-contested battles, wounded at Opequan, and in several engagements acted as brigade commander, and was mustered out and finally honorably discharged July 3, 1865. charged July 3, 1865.

In 1866 he served as a member of the house of delegates, and led in opposition to the test oaths which were enacted by that legislature. There had been no organized resistance to such measure, but by his public criticism he aroused a sentiment which later re-sulted in the transfer of the political power in the state to the Democratic arty. In religious affairs he was equally active. The Baptist denomination owes to him its rescue from apathy and discouragement and its present ag-gressive condition. He was mainly gressive condition. He was mainly instrumental in organizing the General Association of West Virginia, which elected him its first president, and so continued him for several years.

In 1866 he was the Democratic candidate for Congress in his district, and made an aggressive and bold canvass, but was defeated. In 1868 he delivered the master's oration at his alma mater, Columbian College, and received the A. M. degree. He was a member of the state senate from 1872 to 1879, as a Democrat, and was President thereof; was an able and quick parliamentarian. an able and quick parliamentarian, popular and impartial.
